'Smoke alarm saved our lives': fire victims

by Andrew Milne

Yes, smoke alarms are a good idea.

"It was this that saved us," says Claire Brown, of Lutterworth, holding up the now melted, mangled chunk of plastic. "Heard it and woke up. I don't know what would have happened otherwise."

That was around 1:00 am, July 5. Brown and his wife Rheta then fled from their residence in the Lutterworth Pines subdivision off highway 35 south of Minden, to find their car, their carport, and the workshop beyond on fire. The carport, says Brown, hadn't gone up yet, but the heat was already too much for him to get close to it with his fire extinguisher.

The car's gas tank later exploded, and the fire spread to the Brown's house. The Anson, Hindon and Minden fire department was able to stop it from destroying the house.

Claire Brown holds the melted and twisted smoke alarm which awoke the couple early Wednesday morning. Below, the charred remains of the Brown's garage and workshop. The fire spread to their home in the background but was brought under control before the building was destroyed.

When it was all over, the Brown's living room and kitchen were charred ruins, and the rest of the interior of the house was coated in a thick layer of soot. The car, the carport, the workshop, and a shed beyond were entirely destroyed.

The Browns were insured, and are told their home should be rebuilt in a few months. In the interim, they'll be staying with relatives.

Brown, for his part, seems to be dealing with it pretty well. He's up and looking over the remains. He looks at the car — now a burned-out shell of bare metal, and jokes with neighbour and the curious who stop by to view the wreckage.

"Anyone want a car — slightly used?" he asks, laughing.

The fire department says the fire appears to have started in the car.

Former US President will speak at PineStone meeting

It has been confirmed that former United States President, George Bush, will be one of several featured speakers to address a meeting being held in October at PineStone Resort and Conference Centre. The former president's participation was confirmed in a press release issued by the resort last week.

The conference, entitled The Future of Business in North America: 2000 and Beyond, will be held October 13 to 15.

Bush will be the keynote speaker at a gala dinner Saturday, October 14.

The conference is expected to attract 150 of North America's top business executives. "Senior Canadian and American executives will have an unprecedented opportunity to share ideas and compare corporate strategies on issues relating to trade, economics, marketing, asset management and internal control," the press release stated. The conference is sponsored by KPMG Management Consulting.

The weekend will include a number of symposia lead by distinguished experts in a variety of fields. Among the speakers at the conference will be:

- Nuala Beck, economic analyst and best-selling author.

- Frank Clegg, general manager of Microsoft Canada.

- Frank Feather, renowned futurist and strategic marketing expert;

- Norman Inkster, former president of Interpol and head

Special fireworks

On Canada Day residents of Northern Eagle Tent and Trailer Resort had a great deal to celebrate. Three years ago the trailer park was destined to be sold for development, but the campers stepped in and formed a co-op. As a result, three years later they own the park. And to top it all off, the property is now mortgage-free. They celebrated this special occasion and Canada Day by organizing a full day of activities capped off by a special ceremony at which the mortgage to the property was burned. One of the camp's original owners, Murray Robertson, was present along with Derek Rewbury, the Association since the first president of the camp became a co-Northern Eagle Campers operative.

FOCA executive director dies

Jerry Strickland, long-time president of the Miskwabi Lake Area Cottagers' Association, Executive Director and former president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA) has died. Strickland passed away Tuesday, July 4, at Scarborough General Hospital, after a battle with cancer.

The man was respected throughout the province for his efforts in organizing cottagers. He was one of the strongest forces behind FOCA, a federation which drew hundreds of cottage associations and thousands of individual cottage owners together under one umbrella organization. It was through FOCA, and often through the presentations made by Strickland, that the voices of the owners of recreational property in Ontario were heard by the political powers in Queen's Park. It was through his efforts that cottagers became a body whose opinions and concerns drew respect and consideration.

While many of the issues he brought into focus have not been resolved, it is highly unlikely that they would have received the attention of politicians and civil servants without his careful research and leadership.

Among the areas of concern he brought to the fore were revisions to the Planning Act as they affected rural property owners, market value assessment, and changes to the provincial taxation laws to remove education funding from property assessment. He was a staunch supporter of safe boating practises and was an advocate of some form of training before individuals are allowed to operate a boat.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jean Anthon, a former president of FOCA and 10 year veteran of the Board of Directors described Strickland as an individual, "...who came as close as anyone could to being called 'Mr. FOCA'. The organization was his passion and after he retired from work, it blossomed under his management." Anthon described the man as being relentless in his pursuit of an issue but always willing to give every point of view a fair hearing.

Strickland's interest in cottage issues was reflected in his involvement with the Miskwabi association. He served as president of the group for 20 years, stepping down last July at the organization's annual meeting. At that time Strickland paid credit to the many other members of the association who had assisted him over the years. As an indication of his ongoing interest in issues affecting cottaging, he reminded the in-coming executive, that while he would be stepping down as president, he would still be keeping an eye on their efforts. At that time, the Miskwabi Association presented Strickland and his wife Monica with a painting of their cottage.

Jerry Strickland is survived by his wife, four daughters Theresa, Barbara, Eileen and Patricia, three sons, James, William and Stanley, his brother Walter and 15 grandchildren. The funeral service was held Friday in Toronto.

Jerry Strickland and his wife Monica were presented with a painting of their cottage at last July's meeting of the Miskwabi Lake Area Cottagers' Association annual meeting, in appreciation for their many years of service to the organization.

Mountain Lake POA donates $500 to clinic

Members of the Mountain Lake Property Owners Association have endorsed the efforts of the Minden Lions Club in their efforts to create a medical clinic for the community, by pledging a $500 donation to the cause. The contribution was endorsed at the association's annual general meeting held Saturday at the Minden Community Centre.

The donation was made following a report by Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Jean Anthon, a former president of the lake association. She has been involved with attempts to resolve the medical crisis over the past year. She explained to the meeting the various changes that have taken place and how the Lions Club's purchase of the Dawson Medical Clinic is seen as a positive step toward resolving the crisis. Anthon also told the group there had been new inquiries from doctors interested in locating in Minden and said the community committee would be following up on those contacts.

The reeve noted that under the Lions Club administration, any doctor wishing to practise in Minden will be welcome to work out of the clinic. As well, The Lions Club contract with the doctors does not include a non-competition clause. She said the community hopes to be able to attract at least four doctors to ensure the ongoing operation of the hospital and to have enough of them in the community to meet the needs of the surrounding population.

Ian Daniels, the president of the Mountain Lake Association said the medical situation in the village was of particular interest to his organization because of the growing number of members who are becoming year-round residents.

Noise concerns

The recent addition of a seaplane base at the north end of Mountain Lake has some property owners upset enough to instruct their association to form a task force to look into the issue, create a fund to which members can make voluntary contributions to support this effort and have a special $10 per member levy to also be used in addressing the concerns.

Last year, Day Airways moved its operation from Lake Kashagawigamog to Mountain Lake. The company set up a refuelling depot at Hart Lodge and began offering charter flights from that location. The company operates a deHavilland Beaver, described as the workhorse of the Canadian north, but also one of the noisiest aircraft of its size.

The property owners expressed concern for a number of reasons. The first is the noise generated by the aircraft when it takes off. The president of the association reported that, according to his research, while the plane does exceed current noise standards, those standards have not been applied retroactively and Beavers would continue to be allowed to operate outside the standard. He also said that the manufacturer indicated there was no way of muffling the noise the aircraft makes.

The executive has met with the operators of the aircraft and the owner of Hart Lodge to see if any compromises might be worked out. Daniels said an agreement was reached to limit the daily start of flights to 9 a.m. A property owner reported to the meeting that one day the first take-off occurred at 8:30 a.m. She said on a recent weekend the airplane flights occurred once every half hour. "I had to go home (to the city) to get a few days of peace and quiet."

Several residents also expressed concern about the danger to swimmers and boaters by the aircraft activity. Daniels said that according to the pilot, some motor boat operators are coming too close to the aircraft when it is taxiing and could be creating dangerous situations.

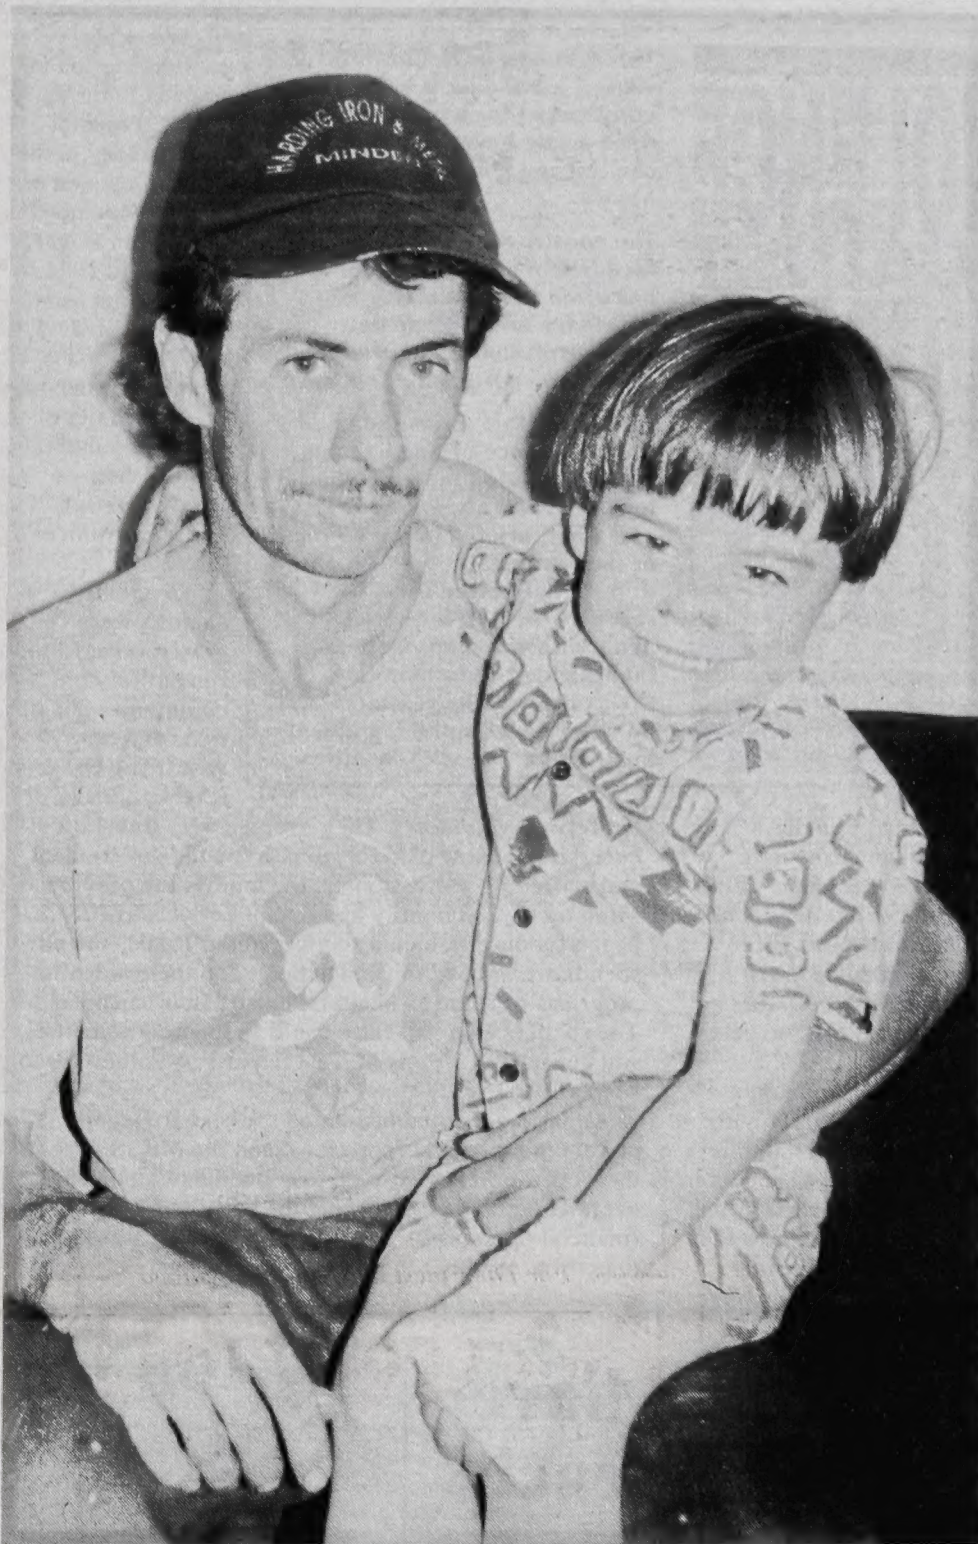

The members instructed the executive to take whatever means it deemed appropriate to respond to their concerns, including further investigation, consulting with lawyers and meeting with the operators. The group also agreed to document any problems they observe and circulate a petition expressing their concerns.

Water quality

Bruce McMillan reported to the group that the quality of the water in Mountain Lake continues to be excellent and there has been no deterioration in the samples taken during the past year.

Home again

Jimmy Voicey celebrated his fifth birthday July 1 and it was a particularly happy occasion for the child and his family. Just a few days earlier, the youngster had been pulled unconscious from a smoke filled bedroom, by his father, David, and rushed from their Scotch Line Road West to the Minden Hospital. Doctors were able to revive the child, who was then sent to Sick Kids Hospital in Toronto for observation and released a few days later. Back home, a little worse for wear from the experience and hopefully a little wiser, Jim and the family are grateful for the swift action of the doctors and the concern of the community.

SAFE PLACES

June, 1995. A group of men and women is fastening vapour barrier and installing drywall in a newly erected building in Haliburton Village.

They're volunteers — some from the trades, some less experienced, all working for free. The project is heavily financed by community donations — volunteers, a society of friends. So far, the only government money in the whole project has been the salaries paid to two coordinators on contracts to get the project off the ground, and all of $10,000 to be used towards rent. The rest came from this community, and the project expects to be able to continue to run almost entirely on direct community support.

The project is meant to provide short term emergency housing for women leaving abusive relationships, and this building is where those women will be housed. In a very real sense this is a community project, done by the community, for the community.

Susan Wilson, hired on contract as a community liaison worker for the project, is full of praise for the people who have made it happen.

"What impresses me," says Wilson, "is the continuing level of commitment. And we're not just talking about a few people here. We're talking about hundreds of people who remain committed to seeing this facility created in this community, regardless of the ups and downs."

The project has, however, been meeting with some criticism. In the media and in public meetings, questions have been asked about the role in society of women's shelters in general and of the future Women's Emergency House in particular. Critics charge that women's shelters are often unfair to men in their practices — that they collude with women making false allegations of sexual abuse or of child abuse for material gain, to obtain custody of the children, or merely for spite. One suggestion made has been that the shelters should 'screen' their clients to weed out any groundless charges of abuse. And Gena Robertson, executive director of Supportive Initiatives for Residents of the County of Haliburton (SIRCH), the umbrella organization of social agencies under whose auspices the project is run, reports one suggestion made to the project was that the House sit down with both the woman and the partner she says abused her, "to determine", as she puts it, "who was right".

These suggestions, these criticisms, though not entirely illogical at first blush, and not entirely without value, do seem to suggest a certain confusion in this community over the usual roles of women's shelters in society. That's a matter of some concern, considering the fact that this community has some say in how the facility is to be run.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN IN THE HOME

SECOND OF FOUR PARTS
BY ANDREW MILNE

This summer, in Haliburton village, a building is being constructed for women who need a safe haven where they can escape abuse in their own homes.

The construction of similar facilities in other communities has often been met with resistance and with anxiety. Haliburton County has been no exception.

Last week, this series sketched the experience of one woman abused and dominated by her husband, and attempted to explain it, briefly, in the context of the feminist theory of male differential power. This, the second article in the series, deals with women's shelters — their history, their mandate, their purpose, the reasons they do what they do, the logic behind building such facilities.

Women's shelters started in Canada in the early 1970s. The first such facility in the country opened in BC — Vancouver Transition House, founded in 1971 by a group that had originally grown out of the first women's group at the University of British Columbia. Similar centres were operating in Ontario within two years.

Originally, the shelters were grassroots efforts, run entirely on community donations and on shoestring budgets, relying heavily or entirely on volunteers. They evolved over time however, and are now paid for, in part, by the government, and staffed by professionals. In Ontario, the provincial Ministry of Community and Social Services (MCSS) began funding women's shelters in the 1980s, and now spends around $42 million annually on the residential programs of some 98 shelters, mostly in urban areas. The shelters also still raise funds in their communities, and generally still rely at least in part, on volunteers to keep afloat.

Ontario government-funded shelters are legally private non-profit corporations, and the MCSS' role in their operation is restricted to concerns related to overall community needs and the soundness of their financial operations. To establish a shelter, a group has to petition the MCSS, demonstrate that there is a need,

"As a funeral director, I deal with people who are experiencing deep emotions. They are overcome with grief and sometimes it's difficult to know how to reach out to them.

With some people, a soothing word or a reassuring touch on the arm makes all the difference. With others, it takes a little more time to find the right way to reach out. Everyone feels pain differently. By taking time to listen, we discover what we can do to make things a little easier."

demonstrate that the facility will have enough clients to be viable. The MCSS audits the shelters' expenditures annually, reviews them to assure they are serving the population they contracted to serve, adequately, ensures staffing levels are in line with the number of clients the facilities serve. Beyond that, and in particular with respect to issues of competency and conduct of their staff, the shelters are on their own.

The Women's Emergency House, it should be noted, is thus not a shelter in the sense that MCSS defines them. As noted above, its funding will be largely local, rather than government-provided, and, more critically, its staff will consist almost entirely of volunteers as opposed to professionals — a little like the original shelters of decades ago.

The reason is that Haliburton, like many rural areas, doesn't qualify for a government-funded shelter under MCSS guidelines because the low population is unlikely to lead to enough demand for services to make it viable. A per diem rate from County Social Services will pay for the stay of women who qualify when they actually use the facility, but apart from this, the funding that runs the House will come directly from the community. Robertson reports the project organizers aren't even counting on that rate to keep it going, since they can't know how heavily the facility will be used. They're counting on the community — the society of friends and donations from businesses.

The community supports the shelter, and the board directing this project, therefore, is quite directly accountable to the community. That makes it essential, therefore, that members of this community think about the issue, consider soberly and advisedly whether the criticisms levelled at the project and at shelters in general make sense to them, and consider whether the policies the House intends to follow are going to be helpful to the women who use the facility. There will inevitably be discussion. Ideally, it should be well-informed.

However, keeping it well-informed, and separating fact from fiction from myth may well prove difficult. Now, more than two decades after the founding of the first shelter in this country, there are people with some very specific grievances against the shelter system. Further, violence in the family is unavoidably a contentious, emotional topic — any research done into the problem, whatever its conclusions — any theory constructed to explain it, inevitably offends someone's sensibilities. Almost anything you can say about the problem is likely to offend someone, somewhere.

However, there are truisms probably almost everyone can agree with: that a woman trapped in a relationship with an abusive man, a woman whose life is in danger or whose general welfare is suffering, does need a way out and somewhere to go; that this is a large enough problem to deserve society's attention, and that a women's shelter probably fits this need fairly well.

Given all of that, understanding what shelters generally do, and why they do what they do is probably of value.

The purpose of the original shelters, and the purpose of all 370 some shelters now in existence across the country, was then, and remains now, the same — and it is the purpose as well of the Women's Emergency House: to offer support — both emotional and practical — to women escaping from abusive relationships.

The reason the original shelters — and those that followed — were founded, was also quite self-evident, given the framework of differential male power in society, outlined briefly last week: a woman, due to the lower wages women on average are paid, would be far less likely than her male partner to have the financial resources to leave the relationship on her own initiative and under her own steam. A woman, for complex reasons related both to her smaller [on average] physical size and again to attitudes in society, may be in physical danger if she doesn't have somewhere safe to go. Further still, due to attitudes in society censuring and intimidating women who leave the relationship or protest against their abuse, she is quite likely to need emotional support. The shelters attempted to provide this. They also sometimes attempted to provide or recommend legal assistance.

So in the simplest terms, the primary purpose of the shelters was in their name: they were meant to shelter women in danger. Their first concern was her safety. After this, but in harmony with it, came the idea of helping her develop the tools, the confidence, the validation to survive the ordeal and to survive in society afterwards.

Donna Yuile is coordinator of the Peterborough YWCA's Women's Safety Network.

No, says Yuile, the Network's two Peterborough shelters — Crossroads I and II — do not ask the women for evidence of their abuse prior to admission or investigate their claims in any way. Quite simply, she says, this isn't what they're there for.

Says Yuile, "Our belief is that the majority of women do not lie about being abused. There is just too much stigma attached to it. There's still a belief that she causes it, that it's her fault, with something she did or something she didn't do.

To hear her publicly say 'I'm an abused woman' isn't something we've experienced if she hasn't experienced the abuse. There may be one or two, sure. In any system there may be one or two. But you don't make your mandate around those."

Furthermore, in the often very emotional battles over abuse, challenging or investigating her claim is hardly compatible with the shelters' intended role of support. Says Yuile, "That's part of the history for abused women — that they haven't been believed — that it doesn't happen — that they are making it up. With most of them their partners are up-standing citizens in the community. They may be respected. They only abuse at home. They choose not to do any of that in their workplace or in their social environment, and she hasn't told anyone before. So it's very important that she's believed when she begins to talk about it."

Evidence has been brought forward that women do make false charges of abuse, and that the shelters have been involved — whether knowingly or otherwise, in cases in which men went to jail. The frequency of such occurrences is still up for debate, and will be dealt with at greater length next week.

Of the latter argument, however, what more can be said? It has simply never been the shelters' role to decide who is right or decide who is wrong, and why should it be? Their role is to make escape easier, for women who might have no other way out, women who may need every ounce of support they can get. Finally, what mandate, even what authority could they possibly have to investigate charges or attempt to affix blame?

In most allegations of criminal behaviour, one expects the courts and the police to do that. Ask this: why should violence in the family be any different?

Certainly, the people who run the shelters aren't saying either, that couples having difficulties should not have access to services directed more towards reconciliation or support in the context of a relationship — marital counselling, third party arbitration. SIRCH, it should be noted, does also run programs devoted to assisting existing families cope with difficulty. Perhaps it could be argued there is a need for more such services in society as a whole. Ask this however: is a woman's shelter, intended for the use of women who believe they are in real danger, in any way the appropriate venue for such services?

The shelters, simply, again, come to bat for women who say they've been abused and say they need help. That's their job. The Crossroads shelters in Peterborough, for example, fit this framework closely, and have never said otherwise. They do not, says Yuile, make submissions to the court of their own volition. The shelters do what the woman tells them as far as keeping records and communicating with the court (though naturally, along with everyone else on the planet, they can be subpoenaed). Yuile's explanation is simple: yes, they're on the woman's side. That's their mandate.

Says Yuile, "We won't hand over any information unless we are subpoenaed or it's requested by the woman. In our shelter we never make a report without the request from the woman or from the court itself or from the crown or whatever. A woman can read her file in the shelter at any time. She can make changes to it — anything we write down about her... We're not in the position of saying oh yes, she's right or he's wrong. We work with the woman. Now if he calls up, which he often does, and wants to explain his side, it's not our role to listen to his side. But it is our role to refer him to someone who can listen to him and can help him."

As to child abuse, women's shelters fall under the Child and Family Services Act, and are thus required by law to report any suspicion whatsoever of child abuse to the Children's Aid Society (CAS). The Crossroads shelters' children's counsellor is not expected to go searching and digging, but should anything be found, the case, with names and specific details omitted, is generally run past one of the CAS' intake workers, and that intake worker advises on how to proceed. Providing it doesn't appear it was the woman who committed the abuse, the shelter prefers that she make the call to report it, and this is what most often happens. In the cases in which she cannot or will not make the call, the law is explained to her, and the shelter makes the call.

The planned Women's Emergency House's policies are not entirely in place yet, but Robertson says she expects record keeping will be minimal. Naturally, they will have to answer a subpoena as would anyone, and the law regarding the reporting of child abuse applies to them as well. But no, says Robertson, they have no intention of submitting court reports. They will refer the woman to other services, which potentially includes legal aid, of course. In short, their relationship to the court will be limited to what the law requires.

Finally, consider the following:

- Domestic violence does happen here. Between January and November 1994, the Minden OPP reports they answered 50 domestic calls, and laid 19 charges.

- Women are on average economically disadvantaged relative to men. There are more of them below the poverty line, and their relative wage rates in this country are approximately three-fifths of men's, on average.

- Women in rural areas are believed to stay in abusive relationships longer — from five to eight years longer — due in part to the low availability of services.

And shelters, whatever the critics may say about their relationship to men, skilfully run, do on balance help their clients. Beyond the obvious physical fact that it gives them somewhere to sleep, somewhere to gather their wits, there's the very important matter of having someone to talk to.

Says one woman who used the Peterborough shelters, "What validated me most was meeting and talking to the other women, and hearing the parallels and realizing I wasn't alone. I think — I know — that the children felt the same way because they had the children's counsellor who listened to what they had to say and said, 'You didn't do this to yourself. You're not responsible.' Hearing other women saying 'Such and such happened to me,' thinking that happened to me too, I realized I'm not the only person that was married to somebody like this."

Consider all that, and then consider this: this community has begun the process, in building the Women's Emergency House, of acknowledging that violence in the family happens here, and that women can benefit from a specific form of protection from it. It has not denied, in any way, that men can suffer as well. It has not said, in any way, that other services — some of them for men — would not be valuable as well.

Wilson, in any case, is proud of her community for the way it has responded in supporting the project, and is optimistic about the future. This, she says, can be the beginning of rural communities solving the problem of providing a place for women in violent relationships.

Says Wilson, "Because rural areas do not qualify for government funding for shelters for abused women, we have to do it ourselves, and this community has risen magnificently to that challenge. And when we have this place created and up and running, other rural communities will be able to come to us and say how did you do it? How did you develop the program? How did you finance it? What did you find the demand was like? How did you fill the demand? And then they can take what we've done home and apply it to their own communities."

Is this not then something worth supporting?

Next week: 'Balance or Backlash?' — the critics of current approaches to violence in the family, and what they mean for Haliburton County.

SLACAR annual meetingBeaver is baffled but the vandals are not

It is not so much a matter of baffling the beaver. They seemed to do that all right. Now the challenge will be to stop the vandals who continue to destroy the handiwork.

The South Lake Association of Cottagers and Resident held its annual general meeting Saturday July 1 and learned that the device installed to help stabilize lake water levels works, as long as humans keep their distance.

Known to the property owners around the lake as the 'beaver baffle', it is a long piece of culvert which installed through the middle of a beaver dam. The tube allows water over a certain level to escape from the lake while the beaver dam holds back the water if the level should slip below that of the culvert. Since the tube drains the lake quite a distance away from the dam, the beaver generally does not interfere with the outflow.

"With the beaver helping to hold back the water, and the culvert allowing excess water to flow out, we were able to maintain a constant water level on the lake," association director and Snowdon Councillor Ray Lymer explained.

The system was working well until vandals arrived on the scene, pulling out the culvert and in one case attempting to destroy the dam. "The result has been a major fluctuation in water levels. Since South Lake is spring-fed at the upper end of the watershed, we can't lose any more water than we should, particularly with this dry season."

During the discussion, members of the organization expressed frustration about the vandalism and the costs to the organization. It was suggested at one point that the group withdraw from the project and allow the beaver to set the water level on the lake without the help of the beaver baffle.

However, as the discussion continued, several members felt they would be "giving in" to the vandals and it was necessary to demonstrate that the group would not accept that kind of action. This opinion was reiterated by several others in attendance, including Snowdon Reeve George Simmons and OPP Constable Ron Buchanan. In the end, the association decided to leave it to the special projects committee to proceed as it saw fit.

Lymer commented after the meeting, that the committee will be attempting to re-install the beaver baffle and hopes the other property owners on the lake will respect the efforts of the association.

Water quality

In other matters related to the quality of the lake's water, the meeting was told that a report issued by the Constable Ron Buchanan spoke to the South Lake cottagers about community policing.

Ministry of Environment, based on testing carried out last year, said that the phosphorus levels in the lake were ranked as 'good' or level 2 on a scale of 1-4.

The association paid tribute to resident Bill Kelly who has taken the water readings on the lake for the past eight years. It was noted that his diligence has helped to create a profile of the health of the lake which will serve as a benchmark for the future. Ann MacDonald has agreed to carry on with the sampling program and a number of other members will assist by transporting the samples to the collection location in Coboconk.

Environmentally friendly products

The association executive was approached earlier this year to act as distributor for a line of environmentally friendly products. Before agreeing, the board suggested it do some comparison shopping. It was noted that the price of products available at the Home Hardware store in Minden showed that the price at the local store was below or comparable to that offered by the other company. "Our suggestion is that if you are looking for an environmentally friendly product, shop locally," secretary Eleanor Lymer told the meeting.

Community Policing

"It is a matter of people caring about each other and their neighbours' property." That is the way Constable Ron Buchanan of the Ontario Provincial Police summed up the concept of community policing as he addressed the South Lake annual meeting. "The people around this lake are a community, and you are part of a larger community including Minden, and beyond that Haliburton County." He suggested by looking out for the interests of the other people who own property around the lake, they would improve the overall quality of life for everyone.

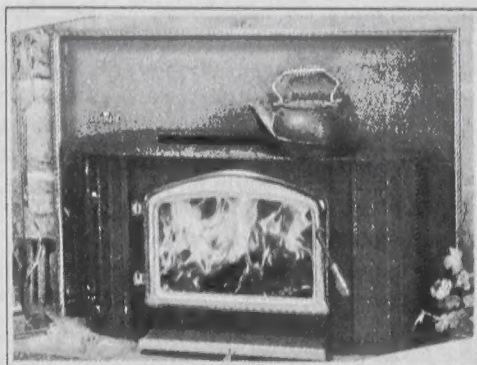

The constable suggested that individuals who are interested in becoming involved, link their efforts with the community policing group in Minden to tap into their resources and expertise.

He noted that a similar group in the Wilberforce area has resulted in a dramatic reduction, and in some

Count them in

If there was any need for an example, it was provided this past weekend on two occasions. At separate meetings, members of two different lake associations pledged a cash donation to help resolve the health care crisis in Minden and surrounding area. Both gestures were made without prompting and in both cases, had a direct plea been made, we feel sure that additional resources and support would have been forthcoming immediately.

The importance of the county's health care infrastructure to seasonal residents is often over-looked when needs assessments and planning are done. The fact is that the seasonal population of the county far outstrips the number of "permanent" residents. As well, it is this group which tends to lead a more active, and it is fair to say accident-prone, lifestyle while in the county.

Of course it would be impractical to develop a health care infrastructure to match the peaks the population experiences. Likewise it is equally impractical to suggest that only those who are counted as permanent population should be considered when creating a health care system. Somewhere between these two extremes is a middle ground which assures residents and visitors alike that, within reason, their health care needs, emergency and long-term, can be taken care of in the county.

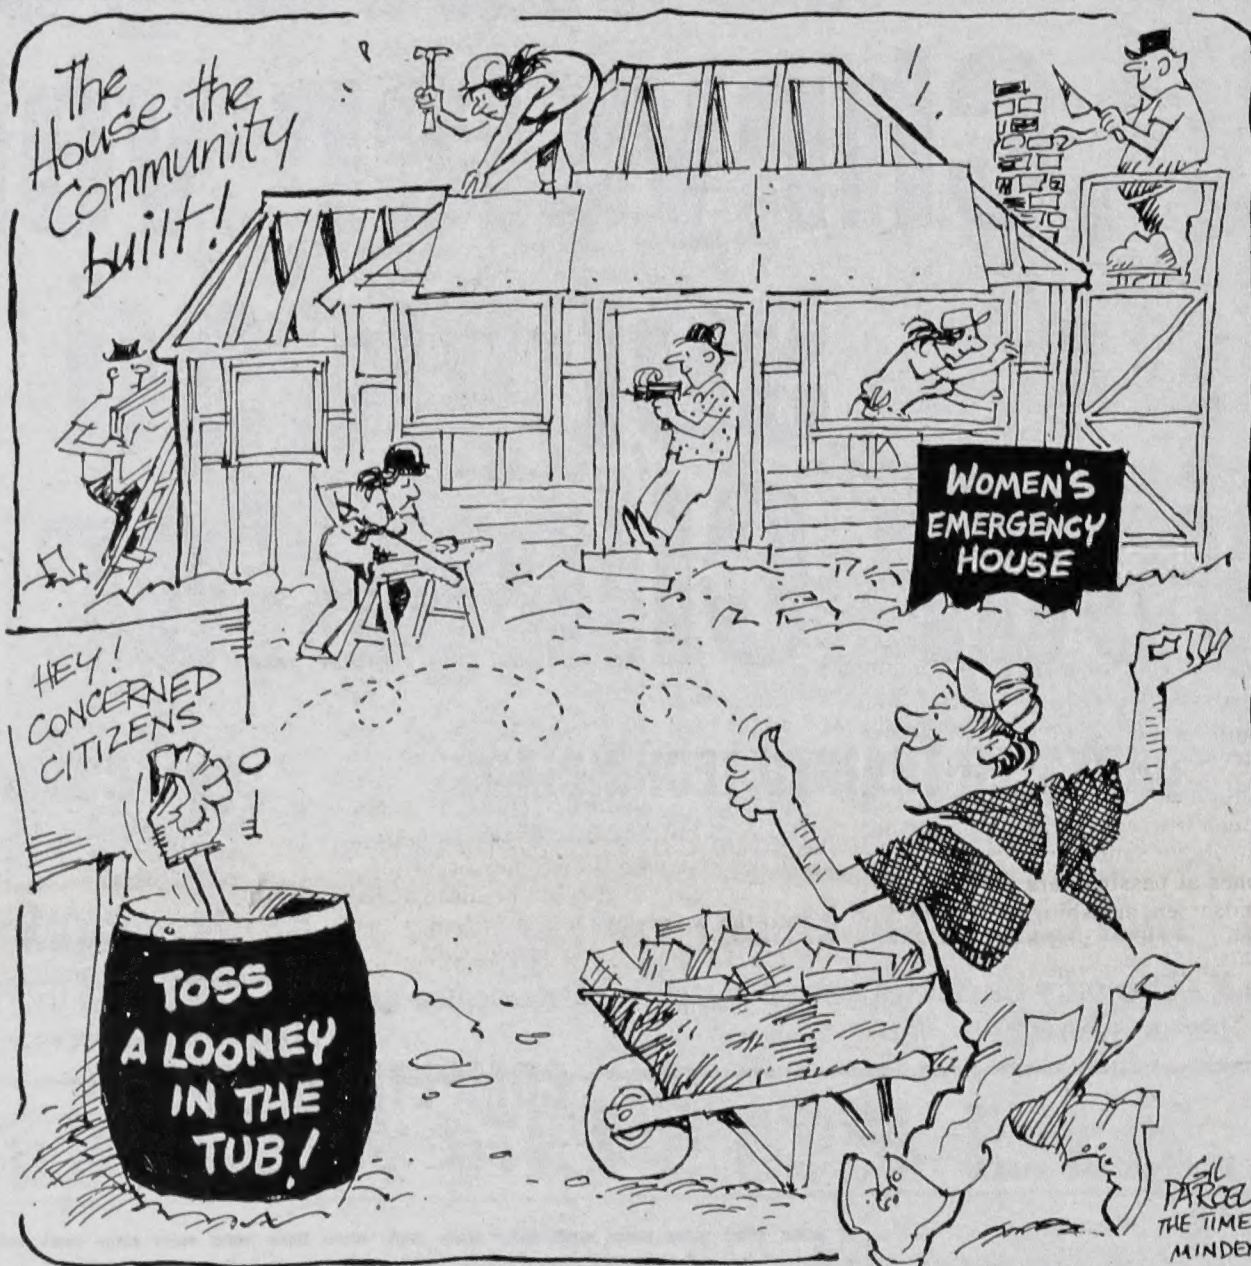

To achieve this reasonable compromise, the needs of the seasonal residents must not be forgotten...because as at least two groups this past weekend have demonstrated, they haven't forgotten about the community's needs.

A driving force

Reeve Jean Anthon described Jerry Strickland as a person who made the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations, (FOCA), blossom and become an active and vital lobby organization. There were many other individuals who were part of the organization's success, but there is little doubt that the direction and organization provided by Jerry Strickland was the driving force behind the federation. For 20 years he served as a member of its board of directors and later as its executive director, always championing the cause of recreational property owners throughout the province and beyond.

There is little doubt he has had a major impact on the way cottaging is perceived both by those who shared that passion with him and those who wished they could. FOCA owes much of what it is today to the man who died last Tuesday. He will be missed.

Friendly Minden??

Editor:

I am writing this letter because I am extremely upset at being treated like an intruder in the town of Minden.

I have been a summer resident of Minden for the past six years and during that time I have noticed continually that the majority of the people of Minden do not seem too pleased to serve me when I frequent their business establishments.

Very rarely does anyone say hello, let alone "How are you today?" The cashiers at some of the major stores in particular have a hard time (and sometimes don't) even ask for the amount of the purchase, i.e. "That will be $24.98, please," or say please and thank you. The ladies who operate one store on Minden's Main Street must know my face by now as I have been in there dozens of times and they still can't manage to say "Hello". On Saturday, I said, "How are you today?" to the cashier in one store and after pausing for about 30 seconds, she lifted her head and looked at me as if I were out of my mind.

Unless I am mistaken, the town of Minden depends largely on tourists in the summer months. I cannot believe that the people of Minden are not more courteous and genuinely glad to see tourists in their establishments.

Minden is a lovely town, and I see efforts being made to attract tourists, but the attitudes of some people here is destroying the positive effort made by others.

Feeling of betrayal

Editor:

Last winter, when John O'Reilly stood up before 1,500 people at the gun rally organized by the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association and stated unequivocally and emphatically that he would vote against his government's gun control legislation as then drafted, he was cheered. Letters like his own and that of Bill Valentine will in no way restore his credibility nor correct the feeling of betrayal that all those persons now feel towards O'Reilly on his failure to live up to his promises.

All municipal buildings should be smoke-free

Editor:

(An open letter to Reeve Jean Anthon and the Anson, Hindon and Minden Council.)

I commend the Anson, Hindon and Minden council and the environmental advisory committee in their acknowledgement, (council meeting May 27) that smoking in public places is indeed an issue that will require further review.

When our health costs are spiralling, smoking is a known cause of most preventable diseases. It is certainly known as a major cause of cancer. However, most people do not realize it is a major preventable cause of heart disease and stroke.

Citizens wouldn't permit a jumbo jet crashing every four days, killing everyone on board, but this is the result of the number who die each year in North America from smoking related diseases.

I urge the residents of Haliburton

Rock thrower doesn't realize the danger

Editor:

Whilst my family was travelling South on Highway 35 at around 8:30 p.m. on Sunday night, some young idiot in a white tee-shirt and white baseball hat was standing on the hillside above Sandy Bay Road throwing stones at passing cars. One hit their windscreen, smashing it. There is an open topped car and had it been open at the time, someone could have been killed.

There is enough traffic on the roads on long weekends to contend with, without lunatics as well.

If you know someone who fits this description, probably early teens, maybe a little younger, please explain to him the danger of his idea of 'fun'. This time it was the unnecessary expense of a new windscreen, next time it may be a life!

They gave chase, but he disappeared into the woods at the top of Sandy Bay Road. - perhaps it was just as well.

America's love affair with guns

"I'm apologizing for America. This shouldn't happen when you come here."

Those were the words of a New York paramedic to a German tourist shot in the shoulder during a boat tour around Manhattan. There was no attempt at robbery. The German tourist hadn't said or done anything offensive. The shots hadn't even come from the boat. They'd come from the gun barrel of some shorebound anonymous crazy who saw the boat going by and decided to fire a few rounds into it.

Don't get me wrong -- I'm not against guns. I rather like them, as a matter of fact. But I can't explain the insane relationship between millions of Americans and their firearms.

And neither can anyone else, as far as I can see. Europeans and Asians are baffled by the almost hysterical attachment American gun lovers display.

They find it incredible that every schoolday morning, 300 Los Angeles police officers are diverted from normal duties in order to frisk students for concealed weapons at the entrances of high schools.

And the numbers are frightening. In just one year -- 1991 -- 38,317 Americans were shot to death. That's more than 100 people a day. And more dead Americans than the Korean War produced.

The Canadian government is doing its best to see that the nightmare stops at the border. Ottawa's solution is to clamp down on gun ownership -- make Canadians register every piece of weaponry from Howitzers to BB guns.

Understandable, but I think misguided. Guns aren't the problem. Human behaviour is.

Consider Switzerland. The Swiss base their national defence policy on a citizens militia which can be mobilized in 48 hours. This means the Swiss government hands out fully automatic assault rifles and ammunition to every able-bodied male. They take them home and keep them there.

Yet the Swiss don't go around blowing each other away.

And look at Israel. You see Israelis going shopping with Kalashnikovs slung casually over their shoulders. Handguns are as common as yarmulkes. But Israelis don't usually settle traffic disputes to lovers' quarrels with a burst of machine gun fire.

In the U.K., the Police Federation has just held a vote among the police officers it represents. Four out of five officers voted against carrying guns on a regular basis. Thousands of them indicated they would resign rather than carry arms on patrol.

Black'n White

by Arthur Black

They're not opposed to using guns in extreme situations. They just don't want to make a habit of it, the way Americans do.

It ain't the hardware. It's the people handling the hardware.

Take Japan. A country that crams a citizenry equal to 48 percent of the U.S. population into an area just slightly larger than our Maritime provinces. Based on the American experience, the Japanese should be like starving rats in a cage.

Here are the numbers. The U.S. has twenty times as many murders as Japan, 70 times more cases of arson and 8 times more thefts and robberies.

As a matter of fact if you want to steal money in Japan, the easiest place to do it is the police station. Anyone can walk into a police station and borrow as much as 30 dollars for bus or train fare home. The cops won't even ask to see any ID. They trust you to repay it when you can -- to the police station nearest you.

And death by firearms? Last year an average of 44 Americans were gunned down every day. Last year 38 people were shot to death in Japan -- all year.

The Japanese must look at America and see a world gone mad. The parents of Yoshihiro Hattori certainly must. He was a 16 year old exchange student spending a year in Louisiana. On Halloween night in 1992 he rang the wrong doorbell, looking for a friend's party. The owner levelled a .357 at him and yelled "Freeze!"

"Pardon?" said the student. "Boom!" went the gun. Shot him dead. The kid's Oriental appearance had 'startled' the idiot.

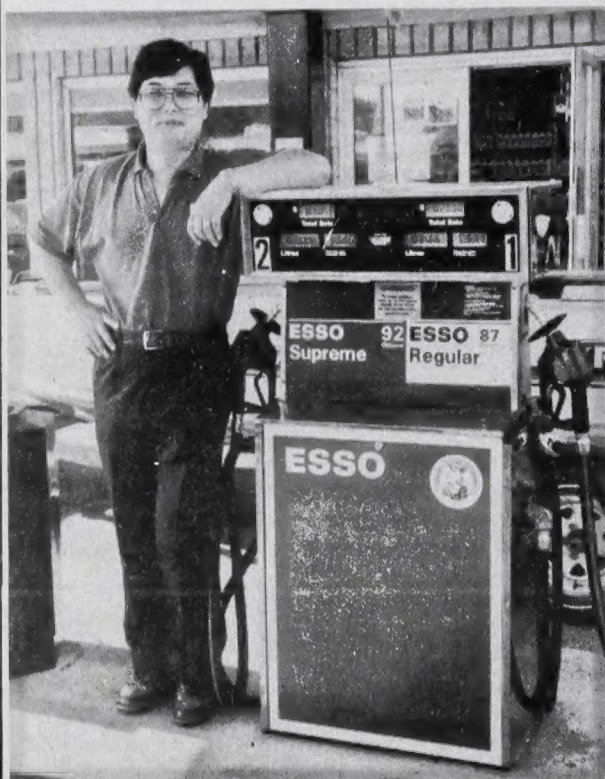

To paraphrase a New York paramedic: We apologize for America. This shouldn't happen when you go there.

• Trevor Eyton, chairman of Brascan.

Senior professors from Wilfrid Laurier's School of Business in Waterloo, will facilitate the round table discussions and the break-out groups during the conference. It is expected that during these sessions, participants will have an opportunity to exchange information and insights that will help them become more efficient business leaders.

The participants will relax Sunday afternoon with a celebrity golf tournament on the 18 hole PineStone course.

PineStone manager Anne Larcade is excited about the conference and the fact that the organizers have chosen the resort as the hosting facility. She suggested that the attention generated by the conference, and in particular by the participation of the former United States president, will not only help to raise the profile of the resort, but of the area as a whole.

cases elimination, of certain kinds of crime. Vandalism, noisy parties, break-ins and dangerous driving practises have all showed a marked decline since the community policing group has taken an active interest in what is happening in the village. He told the group that the community of Wilberforce had experienced $13,000 in vandalism in previous years and that has all but been eliminated by volunteer patrols and by the knowledge that there doesn't have to be an uniformed policeman for there to be a stabilizing influence in the village.

"Get together...get organized. That is the only way to solve your problems," Buchanan told the meeting.

Before leaving, the OPP constable challenged the lake association members to practise safe boating this year. "We don't have the manpower to carry out marine patrols this year, so we won't be there to check up on life jackets or drinking and boating. It's up to you not to end up at the bottom of the lake."

New directors

A number of new directors volunteered their services. Among those who have volunteered to help are Susan Logue, Neil Walker, Tom Nicholson, Jane Leavis, Lorne Booth, Al Foxton, Helen McKirdy and Mary McCutcheon. They will join the existing directors to form the new executive.

Smokers asked to butt out

County to challenge their individual councils to provide smoke-free public buildings. I realize there are instances when smoking may be desired (i.e. where a liquor licence is issued). However, it has been proven, in areas where smoking is not permitted or in low percentage, in bowling alleys, bingo halls, hair salons, etc. business has not decreased. Seniors in residences are demanding smoke-free common rooms.

During the advance poll of the November '94 election, Township Clerk/treasurer Tammy McKelvey acted quickly and decisively to eliminate smoking in the polling station at the Minden Community Centre. Areas are being made accessible for the physically disabled (wheelchair ramp, etc.). Asthma, allergies, emphysema are all invisible but debilitating diseases and smoking is a known trigger.

Second-hand smoke has been known to be more deadly, and to contain more carcinogens, than mainstream smoke (which the smoker has filtered). If one family member smokes--then the whole family smokes--passively, but with more lethal consequences.

Non-smokers: demand a healthy environment for you and your community.

Anson, Hindon and Minden and other councils of Haliburton County, take a pro-active stance and protect your community.

CF Bike-A-Thon set for this Saturday

Organizers are hoping more than 100 riders will participate in the seventh annual Minden Kinsmen Cystic Fibrosis Bike-A-Thon on Saturday, July 15.

Last year 30-35 people participated in the fundraiser, generating net revenues of about $1,500.

This year, the format and start-finish line have changed. Main Street will be closed off from the corner of Newcastle to South Water streets. Riders will start and finish from this area.

With the changes implemented for this year, Rawn Brown, one of the organizers of the event, says the potential is there for even better results.

"It's going to be better this year, I hope," she said. "We're going to have a few different things this year."

Challenges have been issued to all the local cottage associations and to businesses. There will also be sprints down the main street between 11 a.m. and noon, featuring "politicians and/or news people," Brown says.

"We're going to try to have some games for the kids, on the main street, and a karate demonstration," she added.

Brown said there will be "lots and lots of prizes and trophies to be won in different categories."

"We've had tons and tons of support from the townspeople. It's just been wonderful," she said enthusiastically.

The community police association will be helping out by controlling traffic on the bridge and ensuring the safety of participants and spectators.

Riders will travel a 15 kilometre course, from the main street start line to Deep Bay Road. From there they will proceed to Rackety Trail, near Camp Onandaga, and back to the start/finish line.

"There will be check points along the course and places for people to stop and get a drink," she said.

Food and drinks will be provided free for the participants at the end of the ride.

The overall winner will be presented with an All-Terra bike, which has been donated by the bike manufacturer.

Pledge sheets for this fund-raiser are available at The Times office at 134 Main Street.

Midget A Royals dump Woodville 10-4, five-run mercy rule invoked twice

by Jerry Grozelle

Two five-run (mercy rule) innings were all the Minden midget A Royals needed to defeat Woodville in Victoria-Brock Hardball League action last Thursday evening.

The Royals opened the game in Woodville with five runs in the top of the first inning and added five more in the third on the way to a 10-4 victory.

Woodville replied with one in the home half of the first, two in the fourth and one in the fifth.

The first three Minden players to get on base were Tom Bagshaw, Justin Rowden and Darren Mills, each with a bunt single. Bagshaw and Rowden both stole home and Mills was still on base when Jamie Henderson stepped up to the plate and hit a home run with two out. That gave Minden a 4-0 lead. Jamie Swinson followed with a walk and Gavin Gartshore did likewise, putting two runners on base. Sheamus Donnery lashed a double, sending Swinson home with the fifth run for the Royals, which ended the inning by giving Minden the mercy rule maximum for an inning.

Chris Eskelin was the starting pitcher for the Royals. He walked the first Woodville batter he faced, but the runner was tagged out trying to steal third. Eskelin fanned the second Woodville batter and then walked the third man. That walk cost a run when the runner advanced to third and stole home. Eskelin struck the next man out to end the home half of the first frame.

With one out in the top of the second, Ian Clements hit a double. He was tagged out trying to steal third for the second out. The next man struck out to end Minden's half of the second inning.

Eskelin struck the first and second Woodville batters out in the home half of the second frame. He walked the third man and then picked up his third strike-out of the frame to end the threat.

The five-run mercy rule saved Woodville from further embarrassment in the third inning. With one out, Eskelin hit a single. Jeff Wray followed with a walk. Mills lashed a single that drove Eskelin home. Henderson and Swinson each drew a walk to load the bases. The next man struck out. Donnery's single drove in one more and Dwight Bryant hit a single that drove in the fifth run to end the inning.

Eskelin's third inning on the mound saw him give up two walks and strike one out. Both men were left on base as the Woodville boys failed to add to their score.

With two out in the top of the fourth, Eskelin hit a single for the Royals. He advanced to second on a steal, but was left there when the next Minden batter hit a fly ball.

Justin Rowden took over on the mound for Minden in the fourth. The first Woodville man hit a double, but he was later caught trying to steal third and tagged out. A single, a walk and another single produced two runs for Woodville, but the threat ended when one base runner was caught trying to steal (for the second out) and Rowden struck the next man out to retire the side. Those two Woodville runs cut Minden's lead to 10-3.

Swinson was issued a walk with two out in the top of the fifth. He advanced to second, but was left stranded at second when the next man struck out.

Woodville picked up one more run in the bottom of the fifth. The first man Rowden faced drew a walk. He later stole home. One runner was left on base as Rowden picked up two strike-outs and a fly-out to end the game at 10-4.

Youth injured in boating mishap

The Minden Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police is investigating a boating mishap that occurred on Fortesque Lake, Cavendish Township on July 5 at approximately 6 p.m.

A 14 foot fibreglass powerboat was being operated by 13 year old Nicholas Fulton of Toronto when the boat struck the shore. Both the driver and his passenger sustained head injuries and were transported to Haliburton Hospital. The 11 year old passenger, Tyler Forget of Aurora, was flown to Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto with serious head injuries. The accident is still under investigation.

Minden Historical Quiz

Last week's question:
Where was Minden's first bank located?

The first Minden bank was located on the same location as the present CIBC, at the Main Street corner. The Sterling Bank was the first established in Minden in 1895. When it was replaced, the original bank was moved to Peck Street where it served as the community library. In 1984 the building was relocated to the County Town Museum site where it is now one of the exhibit buildings.

This week's question:
When was electricity first generated at the Gull River power dam?

Fishery enhancement

HHOA plans three spawning bed restoration projects

Jerry Grozelle

An ambitious program of spawning bed rehabilitation is planned by the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association (HHOA). Two lake trout spawning areas and one walleye spawning bed will be enhanced with the addition of as much as 110 tons of rock each.

The first of the three projects is scheduled for July 22 on Kashagawigamog Lake. The base of operations for this project will be Bryson's Marine, near the junction of Highway 121 and Airport Road.

"There is a very shallow layer of substrate there and it is silted in," said MNR biologist Dana Kinsman. "It should help with egg survival."

She pointed out that lake trout have been observed spawning in the area and the addition of rock rubble to the shoal should improve the spawning success.

The site on Kashagawigamog is close to the mid point of the lake, near where the hydro line crosses it.

All three projects are supported by CFIP (Canadian Fisheries Improvement Program) grants, which are administered and approved by the Ministry of Natural Resources. The HHOA is the organizing body, with members providing the muscle power to transfer the rocks from the barge to the spawning beds. Organizers also enlist the help of volunteers from the cottage and property owners' associations on the specific lakes where the work is being done. Anyone with a few hours to spare on the days of the projects is invited to join the work crew. There is no remuneration for the day's work, just the satisfaction of knowing you are doing something to help preserve the fish stocks for the future by enhancing spawning areas for lake trout or walleyes.*

The spawning beds that need improvement are identified and marked by MNR personnel. HHOA members work in co-operation with ministry staff.

This is the third year the HHOA has committed its resources to fish spawning bed rehabilitation projects. In 1993, a lake trout spawning shoal in Kennisis Lake was revitalized with about 100 tons of rock. Last summer, two shoals on Gull Lake were similarly rehabilitated with a total of just over 100 tons of rock.

Although the labour is back-breaking, there are many association members who will be participating

SUCCESSFUL PROJECT: This lake trout spawning bed rehabilitation project on Gull Lake last summer was very successful. Ministry of Natural Resources personnel monitored the spawning activity on the two areas that were rehabilitated and found that the lake trout were using the sites to spawn. HHOA members and Gull Lake cottagers deposited about 110 tons of rock rubble at two sites.

for the third year this summer.

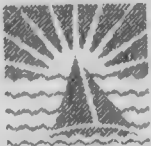

The number of women who are taking up shovels to help with the projects is on the increase, proving that it isn't just the males of the species who are interested in the welfare of the fish populations in the Highlands' lakes.

The second of three projects will be Mountain Lake on August 12. HHOA Fish Committee chairman Scott Vasey attended the Mountain Lake Property Owners' Association meeting this past weekend to explain what the outdoors association is doing and ask for volunteers to help with the work.

The Mountain Lake shoal that will be rehabilitated is along the west side of the point that runs out toward Wintergreen Island.

MNR area technician John Almond agrees that this type of project can be very beneficial to the fishery.

Spawning bed enhancement increases survival rate

"What we have found is that we seem to have the most success where we rehabilitate shoals we know the lake trout are already using to spawn," Almond said. "This is a known spawning site on Mountain Lake. We (the MNR) did some rehabilitation on the east side of the point a few years ago."

Rock will be deposited over an area of about 100 square metres to a depth of about two feet. The size of the rock rubble will range from about three to eight inches in diameter.

"We'll be doing some snorkelling on the shoal after the lake trout spawning season this fall to evaluate whether or not there are eggs on it," Almond said.

Almond said it is a big job to do it in one day.

"With the use of the barge it's pretty slick," Almond said. "To do that by taking the material out there by boat would take a long time. This is a very effective way of really having an impact on a spawning shoal in that short a time period."

A walleye spawning bed in Head Lake at the bridge crossing the narrows on Highway 121 is the third project planned for 1995. The tentative date for that project is September 10. It is hoped that some of the students from the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School will support the cause by providing some labour.

Almond said that the Head Lake project will be much smaller than the other two.

"It's more of a test project," he said. "The rocks will be placed along the shore line. We'll try a small area this year and evaluate it next spring and see if it's getting any use."

Ian Minto, a director with the HHOA, helped with the Gull Lake project last summer. An avid angler, Minto said: "I wanted to get involved with something the club was doing."

He said that the fishing pressure has increased by 10 fold over the years so he is happy to do what he can to help the fishery.

"Those spawning areas should be good for a lot of years to come," he said.

MNR biologist Tim Haxton said the work done by the volunteers is "invaluable". In particular, he said that the Gull Lake project was really successful. MNR personnel monitored the two sites during the fall lake trout spawning run and found that the sites were used and that the newly deposited rock protected the eggs very well.

"They did an excellent job," Haxton said.

Haxton added that the Kennisis Lake project was monitored the same fall but there was no evidence of eggs at the time.

"At the Kennisis site the rock looks excellent," he said, "but the dive I did on it, I didn't see any eggs on the shoal at that time. 'It's worth following up on,'" he added.

"The rehab is the way to go," Haxton said.

Haxton said that one of the concerns of the lake trout initiative is the declining fish spawning habitat. The main culprit is development, which encourages the growth of algae. When the algae dies, it becomes deposited on the spawning shoals, which makes them less efficient. As the cracks in the rock are filled with the deposit material, eggs are less protected from predation.

"That's why the rehab is important," he said, "to keep the spawning beds in the best shape possible."

Haxton said that it often takes a lot of time getting this type of project organized--identifying the shoals in need of rehabilitation, assessing and marking them.

"It's well worth the time," he said.

HHOA raising 10,000 rainbow trout for stocking in local lakes

BROOD STOCK:

10,000 rainbow trout fingerlings have taken up temporary residence in a Highlands' lake to be raised to about one pound in size. They will be released this fall into several lakes and rivers in Haliburton County.

The Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association has purchased 10,000 rainbow trout fingerlings. The fish will be raised and released at various locations in Haliburton County.

HHOA president reported at the association's directors' meeting July 5 that the high temperatures that were experienced for an extended period killed about 500 of the fish. He also reported that bears had broken into the cache of fish feed and about three bags were lost to the marauding bruins.

The association raised 5,000 rainbow trout last year. They were released into several lakes and streams in the county last October. The fish averaged about one pound when they were released. Fish of that size have a much better chance of survival than the smaller fish.

Dedication ceremonies scheduled for August 5

Kinmount park on target, thanks to volunteers and donors

by Jerry Grozelle

Generosity has its rewards in Kinmount.

The first phase of the Austin Sawmill/Railway/Parkland Development Project is nearing completion thanks to the generosity of many area businesses and individuals.

In appreciation, the Kinmount Committee for Planning and Economic Development is having a monument erected at the park and anyone who has donated cash, volunteer labour or materials in the amount of $500 or more will have their names, as park founders, engraved in granite and mounted permanently in the monument.

A wall hanging, which will be on display in the old train station/information centre, will display the names of all the donors.

Diane Austin, who chairs the committee, said the monument will be completed before the official dedication of the park on Saturday, August 5. Austin said that she hopes all those who wish to donate to the cause will contact the committee in time to have their names included in the plaque.

She said the project is on target, with a few finishing touches to be completed before August 5.

The park has a 20 by 40-foot picnic shelter with tables. The limestone retainer wall along the Burnt River is installed and the board fence around the old sawmill is in place.

MNR personnel will be clearing hiking trails through the property to the south of the park starting this week. Playground equipment, bicycle lockups and benches are expected to be installed within the next week or two.

The day of the park dedication will also feature several complementing events. A duck race, from the dam to the first bend in the river at the south end of the park will earn someone a cash prize. Paddle boats and canoes will be available to rent.

MP John O'Reilly, MPP Chris Hodgson as well as officials from all three counties and the neighbouring municipalities are expected to attend the opening ceremonies.

MONUMENT CONSTRUCTION: When it is finished, this monument in the new park in Kinmount will be engraved with the names of the park founders -- anyone (individual or business) who has donated $500 or more worth of volunteer labour, material or cash toward the park project.

A VIEW FROM THE PARK: A few final touches and the new park in Kinmount will be completed. Dedication ceremonies will take place in less than a month.

Paul Windover, Ontario sales manager of H.O. Skis, demonstrates just how easy it is to become head-over-heels about the sport of water skiing. Windover, a national all round champion for ten years, was in Haliburton Friday for a demonstration day sponsored by Glen Sharpley Sports. A number of ski products were available for the public to try. For those interested in copying Paul's move, it is known as a wake flip, as in the wake of the boat or you'll be awake if this doesn't work. A good time was had by all. (Photo by Gregg Anderson)

Lake Kashagawigamog AGM

by Jerry Grozelle

Close to 100 people turned out for the Lake Kashagawigamog Organization Annual General Meeting at PineStone Inn and Conference Centre Saturday.

One of the orders of business for the day was to elect the officers for the coming term.

Nominations for the positions of president, vice-president, treasurer and secretary were submitted and profiles of the four candidates were circulated with the meeting's agenda. A call for nominations from the floor went unanswered and the four new executive members were acclaimed.

Brian Watts is the new president. He is a 15-year resident of Haliburton County. He has served as director of the Chamber of Commerce; was a councillor for Dysart et al for six years and has been the president of the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association for the past six years. He lives in Ingoldsby and operates the Ingoldsby General Store.

Phil Boulton has been elected vice-president. He is a long-time cottager in the area and has been a permanent resident of Haliburton for seven years. He owns and operates Boulton Steel Products in the Industrial Park and Northridge Construction. Phil lives on the South Kashagawigamog Road with wife Hillary.

Patty Morrison has taken over the duties of secretary for the organization. She has been a Haliburton resident for eight years. She resides in Ingoldsby and co-manages the Ingoldsby General Store. She has served on the executive of the West Guilford Community Centre; is a director of Women On Snow; and is a director of the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association.

The treasurer for the coming term is Lynne Bertrand. She and husband Allan, own and operate Lofty Pines Cottage Resort (formerly Kenmar Lodge) on Lake Kashagawigamog in the Ingoldsby Range area. Bertrand has bookkeeping experience and operated a ladies' clothing store. She served on the board for the United Church in Epsom and the board of the Utica Day Care. She has been a Girl Guide supporter and leader.

MPP Chris Hodgson, Minister of Natural Resources, Northern Development and Mines, took time from his busy schedule to speak to the organization members. Hodgson resides on the shore of Kashagawigamog with his wife Marie and their three children. He outlined some of his duties as head of the two ministries. He said he had the opportunity to go down 2,200 feet in a mine shaft near Sudbury.

"For anyone who hasn't been in one, I'd highly recommend it," he said.

Hodgson said he still lives on the lake.

"I'm accessible," he said. "If there's anything I can do to help, don't hesitate to call. That's what I'm here for."

Hodgson mentioned the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association's plan to rehabilitate a lake trout spawning bed on Kashagawigamog. He urged the organization's members to get involved with the project, saying: "It's a worthwhile program to make sure that we maintain and preserve our fish stocks."

He reminded those present that the free fishing weekend was in progress and urged everyone to take advantage and introduce someone to the sport. He pointed out that the conservation laws and limits apply.

He said that fishing had an economic and social impact on Haliburton because a lot of people like to go fishing and a lot of small businesses depend on the revenue that is generated by anglers.

Hodgson closed by thanking the audience members for their support in the election.

"I want you to know I'm here to support you too," he said.

the executive was held. Steve Taylor was elected to the position of vice president of the organization. The president also paid tribute to the many years of service to the organization provided by Derwent Lewis. He had served in a variety of capacities since 1980.

Spawning beds

The association also agreed to help organize a volunteer crew to assist the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association in its rehabilitation of a lake trout spawning bed in Mountain Lake.

The organization hopes to place 100 tonnes of rock west of the point by Fairfield Bay. This would create an attractive place for lake trout to spawn.

Scott Vasey and Keith Hodgson described the process and asked the lake association to provide some volunteers to assist in the project. The spawning bed improvements is scheduled to take place August 12. The lake association said it would encourage its members to become involved and would assist in co-ordinating the effort.

The volunteers will meet at the former MNR landing on Jordan Drive.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all the children who participated in our guessing jars on Canada Day, July 1st, 1995. A special thank you goes out to Dollo's I.G.A., Minden Valu-mart, Marjorie Coulter and Beverly Johnson for their donations to fill the jars.

The winners were:

1. Bubble Gum: Melissa Barry, Ajax, Ontario
2. Peanuts: Mark Evans, Cambridge, Ontario
3. Jelly Beans: Colin Ellis, Minden, Ontario
4. Pennies: Dennis Cox, Minden, Ontario

Congratulations to all the winners.

We are looking forward to seeing you all next year.

Fast, funny, light and entertaining: just in time for summer

by Andrew Milne

It's the basic sitcom for stage — fast, funny, light, entertaining fare.

The Highlands Summer Players are staging My Darling Judith, a comedy by Norm Foster, Wednesdays until August 2.

Their opening night, July 5, was marred by lighting difficulties, but otherwise went smoothly. Yvette Foster, who was among those on the lighting board for the show explained the board seems to have overheated, and said it will be running properly for the next show July 12.

Other than the unexpected blackouts however, the play moves along with energy. The small cast — Doug Brohm, Chris Archer, Tom Robinson, and Deborah Neave in the roles of the clothing magnate, his wife, his employee, and his lover respectively — seem to be having fun with their parts. Revolving around Brohm's straight ahead industrialist/philanderer, Archer bubbles along amusingly as the amnesiac/dipsomaniac wife, Robinson does the basic none-too-bright but likeable comic patsy bit, and Neave is delightfully arch as the coldly ambitious paramour/politician.

Remaining performances are July 12, 19, and 26, and August 2 at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School in Haliburton. Tickets are available at Paulette's and the Rails End Gallery in Haliburton, at the Storeroom in Minden, and at the door. Admission is $8 general, $5 for seniors and for staff and students of Sir Sandford Fleming College. Call 754-3939 for information.

Deborah Neave, Doug Brohm, Tom Robinson and Chris Archer in this summer's theatre production of My Darling Judith.

Local lakes drop to 91.2%

Reservoir lakes in the Haliburton Highlands have declined at a normal pace, down 2.7% to 91.2% on June 26. Water levels are near normal for this time of year.

Kawartha lake levels are near normal at the maximum of their summer navigation ranges. The Otonabee and Trent River flows have been cut back to summer minimum and will remain near there until there is a change in the trend of no significant precipitation.

Conditions along the Waterways are unlikely to change during the next few days as a forecast of scattered showers is in effect for the watershed.

Smiling all the way to the bank

Brenda Ferguson, a member of the Red Cross blood collection team prepares to take a donation from Doctor Norm Bottum of Haliburton, at the July 4 clinic held at the Haliburton Legion. Organizers report donations were down a bit this year — 184 pints were collected.

Another success for Highlands Artisans' Festival

Organizers of the Highlands Artisans' Festival say they were pleased with the turnout this year.

Says Libby Hurrel of the art gallery committee, which runs the Agnes Jamieson Gallery, "They weren't so busy on Saturday because of Canada Day festivities in downtown Minden, but they had a better turnout on Sunday, and I would suggest they had probably a couple thousand over the two day period... I think it was fairly successful. The artisans sold lots so they were pretty happy about that."

The festival is run by Minden's Agnes Jamieson Gallery, and included 65 artists. Proceeds over the festival's expenses go to the gallery. The gallery exhibits a range of artworks, and rotates exhibits around a permanent collection of 60 works, dominated by the work of painter Andrew Lapine.

Shirley Gibson of Bracebridge was one of many artisans to display and sell her work at the Highlands Artisans Festival in Minden. Her specialty, displayed behind her, was Japanese embroidery.

June weather

Days with rain	5
Days with frost	0
River temperature, June 30	23.5	74.3
Days with thunderstorms	3

Everyone was looking for warmer weather in June and we got it, and the monsoons for the first week of the month, but after June 9 we had mostly sunny, warm weather.

We got almost four inches of rain June 1 to June 7. The first rain was June 2 and 3 and was all over southern Ontario. The next rain was June 7 when we got a rain storm between 5:20 p.m. and 8 p.m., almost another 2 inches. This rain storm was 'local', in other words, the northern limit was approximately Mountain Lake and the southern limit approximately Kinmount. It passed on to the east to Haliburton and Bancroft.

The remainder of the month was sunny and warm. No June frost. The closest we had was 2 degrees Celsius on June 15 at full moon.

ity of Kashagawigamog. The water is monitored regularly and the Ministry of Environment has issued the lake with a "good" rating.

Babbs pointed out that water quality can be affected by weather conditions and that brief periodic fluctuations of phosphorus levels shouldn't be of major concern.

A list of articles of constitution were voted on and passed after a few minutes of debate.

Dale Walker gave the treasurer's report and a number of other reports preceded the guest speakers.

Dana Kinsman, a biologist with the Minden office of the MNR was the first guest speaker. She did a presentation on the management strategies for naturally reproducing lake trout and brook trout in the south central Ontario region. She explained the changes in fishing regulations that are expected to be implemented in January of 1996.

Kinsman said that one of the main stress factors on lake trout is "over exploitation, or over harvest."

An explanation of NALMS (the North American Lake Management Society) followed the MNR presentation. NALMS will be holding a North American conference in Toronto this November and members of the audience were encouraged to take in at least part of the five-day conference if they have a chance.

With further provincial and federal governments cutbacks, lake property owners were told they will have to take an increasing responsibility for monitoring water quality.

FOCA (Federation of Ontario Cottage Associations) representative Larry Smith talked about recreational boating, outlining some proposals to make boating safer. Some of the suggestions had been to make it mandatory for operators to take a boating safety course and licensing, among others.

The subject of personal watercraft, such as Sea-Doos was discussed. Smith said that there are a few "jerks" who make it bad for the rest of the people who enjoy those watercraft.

Anson, Hindon and Minden reeve Jeanne Anthon made a short speech.

She said that the Kashagawigamog Organization could be a model for other organizations across the province. She said it is an exceptional organization and "your executive has done a wonderful job for you."

She encouraged everyone to visit Minden, no matter where they live.

"Come and check out some of our facilities," she said. "We've revamped the tennis courts... come on and try them out. There's also a municipal playground right beside our municipal building where you can bring your children or grandchildren and have a good time."

Anthon also discussed the subject of the doctor shortage in Minden.

"As most of you know, we've had a community crisis in a sense that we have lost a number of doctors and we're probably going to lose one or two more very soon," she said. "So, I would ask you to help by letting everyone know about our crisis here and any doctor who has an interest in locating in the beautiful Haliburton Highlands, we have a place for them. As a matter of fact, it was in the newspaper on Monday that the Lions Club in Minden has purchased one of the medical clinics. We'll be able to establish a true community clinic for doctors to operate. This is a real plus for the community and I believe it will be a turning point in moving ahead to improve our situation."

She added that the Minden Hospital is open on a 24-hour, seven days a week basis at this time. She encouraged people to use the hospital facilities whenever the need arises.

Dysart et al reeve Murray Fearrey was the day's final speaker. After extending greetings on behalf of his municipality, he said: "I'd like to go on record as saying that personal watercraft are a pain in the ass. There's more than one jerk on our lake."

Most of the audience signalled their agreement with applause and laughter.

He brought the audience up to date on what's happening in the municipality.

"Our council is committed to tax increases that are no greater than the rate of inflation," he said, adding that he couldn't speak for the Board of Education.

He said that at the county government level, it won't be as easy to maintain a zero increase.

"We will be going ahead with the health care facilities, hopefully within the term of this council, and we will have to debenture that. And that will mean some tax increase," he said.

Fearrey added that the renovations and addition to the county building will also cause an increase in taxes at the county level.

"We'll keep it as low as possible, but there will be some increase in that area," he said.

In regard to further downloading that is expected by the provincial government, he said: "We don't know where we stand, but we do know we are going to have to be smarter and we'll have to do things differently than we have in the past. We have already started to cut back in some areas to be ready for the changes that are coming."

"We're very tax competitive with other areas and we want to remain that way," he concluded.

John Leonard is one of a number of instructors from the Haliburton Highlands School of Fine Arts, who have contributed work for the faculty show at the Rail's End Gallery in Haliburton. The sculpture is done in white granite exposed during the rebuilding of Highway 118 near West Guilford several years ago. The work is a prototype for a memorial Leonard has proposed to be erected in the Artic to commemorate the men who died in the Franklin expedition. The show continues at the gallery until August 12. Happy to be home again: Amanda Woods has returned after a year in Europe

by Misty Bennett

Amanda Woods is happy to be back home again after nearly a year-long stay in Holland as part of the Rotary International Student Exchange Program. Woods has kept the community up to date through letters published in The Times during her eleven month, six day, stay.

The exchange was Woods' first time away from home and although she admits dealing with the separation was difficult at first, she feels somewhat guilty that she didn't miss her family all that much.

While in Holland, Woods stayed with five different families and spent approximately two months with each. "My first host family was on vacation when I arrived so I stayed with my youth officer for one month." The host families all had similar backgrounds and Woods found few differences between them. Her second host family was fairly large, with four children, the rest all had two children none of whom were still at home. This was Woods' first experience as an 'only child' and she admits, "It was enjoyable at times. It gave me a chance to find out more about myself."

When asked if the experience was what she was expecting, Woods stated that she left Canada without any expectations. "I went in (to the program) with an open mind. If I had expected the wrong thing I would have been disappointed."

Holland's school system, Woods discovered, was very different from Canada's with more focus on academics and no sports or special interest clubs offered within the school. Most classes started at 8:30 a.m. and some didn't end until 4 p.m., making for a long school day. The teaching regimen reminded her of the Ontario elementary school system. She stayed with the same group of people all day and they would move as a group to different classes.

Woods spent the majority of her year-long stay in the north of Holland, specifically in the city of Leeuwarden in the province of Friesland. She did, however, get many opportunities to travel within Holland and travelled extensively by train with friends on weekend trips.

Also, Woods had an

In familiar surroundings again, Amanda Woods was back in Minden in time for Canada Day.

excellent opportunity to travel Europe with other Rotary Exchange students from countries such as the United States, Indonesia, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Australia, Brazil, Argentina as well as with other Canadian exchange students. There were 56 students who travelled on a double-decker bus and toured Europe for three weeks, visiting the major cities and attractions in Austria, Italy, France, Belgium, Germany and the Czech Republic.

Prior to her trip Woods has no knowledge of the Dutch language, but after six months she found that she was comfortable with the language and is now nearly fluent in Dutch. She hopes to continue studying Dutch with the assistance of her mother.

In comparing Holland to Canada, the biggest difference Woods noted was the popularity of bicycling. Large numbers of the Dutch travels by bike to most of their destinations including work. Students would take a bus to school only if they lived far away and seldom would the family car be used for anything less than a major outing. The legal driving age in Holland is 18 and gas prices are nearly four times what they are here.

Woods recommends the Rotary Exchange Program to anyone who wants what she describes as, 'the experience of a lifetime'. She loved it and is certain, "I'll remember this year for a lifetime!" She is grateful to all Rotary Clubs that make it possible for students to experience another country for a year.

Her involvement in the exchange program was sponsored by the Rotary Club of Minden. Through their participation in the international program, the club is given an opportunity to send a student overseas and in turn must host a student in this community. This past year the club has hosted Dutch student Mark Mulder. He returns home in a couple of week.

Woods' plans include working until September when she may return to high school for a semester to obtain her final two OAC credits. Woods hopes to go to college in January to study International Business. Travelling will certainly be a big part of this girl's future.

Amanda, second from the left, had a number of opportunities to meet other Rotary exchange students, including fellow Canadians Tricia, Victoria and Clarisa and Lorina, on the right, from Argentina.

Picnic opens outdoor activity area

Monday afternoon the folks were treated to a movie "My Secret Garden".

Tuesday morning Chapel Service was conducted by Rev. Fred Elson. He is a retired United Church Minister. Doris played the organ. Thank you for coming Reverend. In the afternoon we did crafts. Would you believe we are making Christmas decorations already.

Tuesday evening Corinne Arsenault assisted the residents with cards. Wednesday morning was time for fitness. In the afternoon Pearl called bingo. She was assisted by Frieda Hulbeg.

Thursday afternoon the Hyland Crest Ladies Auxiliary held a Strawberry Tea. They are very conscientious about money raising as that money goes towards improving the residents life style here at the home. Many thanks ladies. Friday noon we held a picnic in our new outdoor activity area. A bus load of folks came from Extencicare. It was a beautiful day for an outdoor party. The kitchen prepared a lovely lunch complete with ice cream cones. Everyone seemed happy. Following lunch we moved to the auditorium for our regular happy hour. The Cloggers from West Guilford put on a wonderful variety of dances. It was so hot I don't know how they managed to stay erect. Come back anytime folks, as we sure enjoyed the dancing. We served goodies and beverages. Thanks to Extencicare volunteers for their help.

Saturday afternoon John Menzies entertained in the main lounge. In the evening we held our first Strawberry Social Supper. It was very well received. I had so many compliments about the meal. Food was plentiful and tasty as well. We hope to make it an annual event. On behalf of Hyland Crest I would like to say, "Many thanks to all the folks for the donations of delicious food. Also thanks to all the volunteers who worked so hard at the supper". Without you folks we wouldn't be able to hold this type of gathering. Above all thanks to Doris Robertson for all the organizing and the instigation of the dinner. She has great ideas, believe me. Sunday Rev. Burgess held Chapel Service. Ruth Worthington played the organ. Thank you Reverend. It was a busy week at the Hyland Crest. That's what makes it such a great place to live.

Pets get allergies too

Is your pet constantly rubbing against the rug or furniture, licking and/or biting a specific area repeatedly, having itchy ears and/or feet and bathing excessively? If your trusty sidekick is tormented by these symptoms, it may be suffering from allergies. Your vet will be able to tell you how to treat your pet's condition.

If you have a question that needs answering or you require help accessing services, contact the Haliburton County Information Centre for assistance. Ignoring the warnings

I write this on June 19 drenched in sweat in the high humidity and 40+ temperatures in downtown Toronto.

Last week, the Sierra club announced that fires had destroyed more forest in Canada by mid June than were burned in all of last year. Reports from India indicate that several hundred people have died from prolonged temperatures above 50 degrees.

I wonder how plants and other animals are doing. I once spent two days in Mohenjo Daro, the site of an archeological dig on a desert in Pakistan. The temperature was over 50 degrees and was totally debilitating. I can't imagine living for weeks in that kind of heat.

Niggling in my brain is the thought that I try to suppress because every time it pops up, I feel a squirt of fear in my stomach. Are the fires and the heat waves a warning that global warming is under way? Will this become the norm? I have just returned from Halifax where I attended the people's summit, called P-7. There, a student from the Maldives Islands, a group of low lying coral atolls, begged the Canadians to recognize that global warming is already heating the oceans so the expanding waters threaten to flood places like his homeland "We're innocent victims of actions by the industrialized countries," he pleaded. "Don't you have a responsibility to act? Yet nobody seems to listen to us. What can we do?"

Recently, when I visited Wewak in Papua New Guinea, I was taken by boat 40 kilometres offshore to Koil Island. As we approached this small island, I looked into the water and remarked that we seemed to be passing over a reef. "That used to be the edge of the island," I was told. I soon spotted whole trees lying underwater, confirming that the sea level is rising and flooding the shores.

None of these observations is proof that global warming is happening. But by the time the evidence is incontrovertible, it is highly questionable whether we will be able to turn things around quickly. As the history of the ozone layer informs us, long after we begin to take remedial action, conditions will continue to worsen. The sad thing is there is a win-win approach to global warming but no political vision or will.

When an international conference on the atmosphere was held in Toronto in 1988, delegates urged governments to act immediately to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and proposed a target of a 20 per cent reduction in 1988 levels within 15 years. Studies in Canada, Sweden and Australia all concluded that such a target was achievable, it would improve air quality at ground level and taxpayers would reap a net savings in billions of dollars!

Yet environment minister Sheila Copps admits we would be lucky if Canada's emissions are held to a 13 per cent increase above 1990 levels!

When spokesmen for the petrochemical, forest and automotive industries deny the reality of the threat of global warming, their motives are obvious. But what motivates those who warn of global warming? Could it be they want a future?

Global warming is not a fabrication or exaggeration by environmentalists. It is the opinion of the vast majority of informed climatologists in the world. In Geneva in 1990 at the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, over 700 scientists from 70 nations signed a document warning of the reality of global warming and urging governments to take serious remedial action.

Science and medicine are among the most respected professions in Canada. But you'd never know it from the way their opinions are treated by business leaders, politicians and the media.

If the CEO of a major trans-national corporation suggests the federal deficit retards business or proclaims that social services must be cut back to stimulate the economy, the media are quick to air his opinion and arguments. But what happens when over half of all the living Nobel prizewinners sign "A Warning to Humanity" that declares that the ecological change such as global warming threatens the very underpinnings of human civilization and that we may have as little as ten years to turn things around? Would you believe that Canada's major newspapers and the CBC didn't even report it?

The same thing happened when 58 of the world's Academies of Science simultaneously released a document in February last year reiterating the warning of the Nobel laureates. There was no media coverage at all! Yet, these alarms are not the ranting of eco-fanatics. National Academies of Science are organizations into which the very top scientists, as judged and selected by their peers are inducted. They are the ones who are giving us the warnings.

As a scientist, I have long puzzled over the conundrum that while my colleagues have high public regard, their pronouncements carry little weight. Sitting here sweltering, that jet of fear keeps demanding to be acknowledged.

NOTICE

(File No. RA-95-01)

IN THE MATTER OF the Municipal Act; and
IN THE MATTER OF a proposed by-law of the Corporation of the Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden to stop up, close and convey to the adjoining landowner, portions of the original allowance for road along the shore of Gull River, lying in front of Part of Lots 1 and 2, Concession 3, in the Township of Minden.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN pursuant to Section 300 (1) (a) of the Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1990, as amended, that the Council of the Corporation of the Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden proposes to consider, and if deemed advisable, to pass at its regular meeting to be held in the Municipal Council Chambers on Milne Street, Minden, Ontario, on July 27, 1995 at the hour of 7:30 p.m., a by-law to stop up, close and convey those parcels of land more particularly described as follows:-

Parts of the original allowance for road lying in front of Lots 1 and 2, Concession 3, in the Township of Minden, designated as Part 1 on a preliminary plan of survey, dated July 4, 1994.

The plan of survey is available for inspection in the Municipal Office, at Minden, Ontario during regular office hours.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that before passing the said by-law at the meeting to be held at the time and place above-mentioned, the Council shall then and there, hear in person or by his or her counsel, solicitor or agent, any person who claims that his or her land will be prejudicially affected by the said by-law and who applies to be heard.

DATED AT THE Township of Minden this 26th day of June, 1995.

(Ms.) Tammy McKelvey, A.M.C.T.
Clerk-Treasurer,

Around the County Town

by Jeanne Sears (call 286-1538)

Miss Patricia Reid of Toronto enjoyed the holiday weekend with her mother Gladys Reid.

Holiday weekend guests with Betty and Gerald Hicks were Mr and Mrs Roger Hicks, Emily and Holly from Oshawa.

What a wonderful Canada Day holiday weekend in our village with all the special events and the artisans' festival. Birthday cakes were cut and served, at several places, to the huge crowds and everyone enjoyed the fireworks display put on very safely by our firemen. The weather was wonderful too - a great happy time for everyone.

Dorothy McElwain was away the holiday weekend visiting with Mike and Maureen, Josh and Dan McElwain in Millbrook.

A pleasant family reunion was held on the Canada Day weekend at the Blairhampton residence of H. Lloyd Johnson. Normally held on the Civic Holiday weekend, it was moved up this year as a farewell party for his 17 year old granddaughter, Meaghan (Michael's daughter). Meaghan is following in the footsteps of her Aunt Mary Lou, having been selected by the Kitchener Rotary Club as an exchange student. She left for a year's residence in Thailand on July 5. (Mary Lou was the exchange student sponsored by the Minden Rotary Club in 1976, spending her year in New Zealand). All family members were present with the exception of granddaughter Jennifer Gray who is serving this year as a member of the Ceremonial Guard on Parliament Hill. Except for the constant battle with the blackflies and mosquitos, the only unpleasant event occurred while they were all enjoying the fireworks display in Minden. Some moronic vandal stole the ball from the trailer hitch on Michael's car, causing a lot of inconvenience on Sunday trying to find a replacement. It is a wonderful way of discouraging visitors from returning to the area.

Club 35 euchre game winners for July 3 included Betty Harper with most lone hands, Helen Henderson and Bob Lewis with the highs, Dorothy Walters, Jeanne Penick and Norm Lee. The 50-50 draw went to Hazel Gregory and do not forget the BBQ dinner on July 15.

Mr and Mrs. Doug Carpenter visited Norma Burk at Ross Memorial Hospital where, we are happy to report, she is improving.

Recent guests with the Bob Vicks were Wayne Vick, Dale and Cathy Vick and Tyler, Julie and Meighan Woolfrey, Murray and Alex Swinson and Alec McLeod.

Ralph and Kit Schroter visited the Harold Carson family and Pat and Dan Lyons and girls in Oshawa last weekend.

Good wishes to the following reportedly on the sick list: Gil Parcell, Hilda Harrison, Don Dinclair, Norma Burk, Helen Lee, Ivan Ingram Jr., and Peter Dollo. May you all be well soon..

Sincere sympathy to the families and friends of the late Rod Sproats and Bob Fabian and to Mary Stevenson on the passing of her sister.

Bridge game winners at Stanhope on July 4 were Betty Schlotter, Vange Croucher and Vincent Sahey. No partners are needed for these games which start at 1 o'clock in Stanhope Library.

Euchre game winners at the Noble on Wednesday July 5 were Pat Rousselle and Tod Edgson with most lone hands going to Lynda Gallagher.

Wednesday nights are bid euchre nights at Stanhope and the winners for June 28 included Carol Duncan, Ida Young and Elsie Henderson. Ken Clement, Pat Scadden, Alvin Cowen, Rick Edwards and hidden score Grace Dixon. Moonshots were Brian Henderson with 3, Bill Durkin, Dorothy Walters, Ida Young and Grace Dixon. July 5 winners were Carol Duncan, Maisie McCrone, Jean Scadden, Jim S., Milton Fletcher, Norm Lee, Jessie Skillings and hidden scores were held by Margaret Fletcher and Wally Thomson. Moonshots went to Rick Edwards and Elsie Henderson.

We heard that Minden Library had another book exchange late last month. Pick up a slip with the new hours when you visit next.

Many yard sales coming up - Gelert

Centre has theirs on July 15 as does the Museum corner of Main Street and Parkside. Also Wednesday, July 12 is the Salad Supper and Bake Sale at the United Church starting at 5 p.m.

Kinmount Seniors euchre for June 14 included most lone hands and high lady Mary Wilkins. Others were Violet Schroder, Win Wilson and Ted Wilkins. June 21: most lone hands Danny Pappas, other winners Joan Pappas, Aileen Brown, Bill St. Thomas, Truman McNeil. Join us at the Station in Kinmount Wednesdays at 8 p.m. Lunch and prizes.

United States Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Erich Nash, son of Rick and Doris Nash of R.R.#2, Minden recently departed for a six month over-seas deployment aboard the guided missile destroyer U.S.S. John Paul Jones, as part of the U.S.S. Abraham Lincoln Battle Group.

Nash is one of 323 sailors aboard the destroyer, which left San Diego, California along with six other ships and submarines. They replaced the U.S.S. Constellation Battle Group, which had been operating in the western Pacific Ocean and the Persian Gulf.

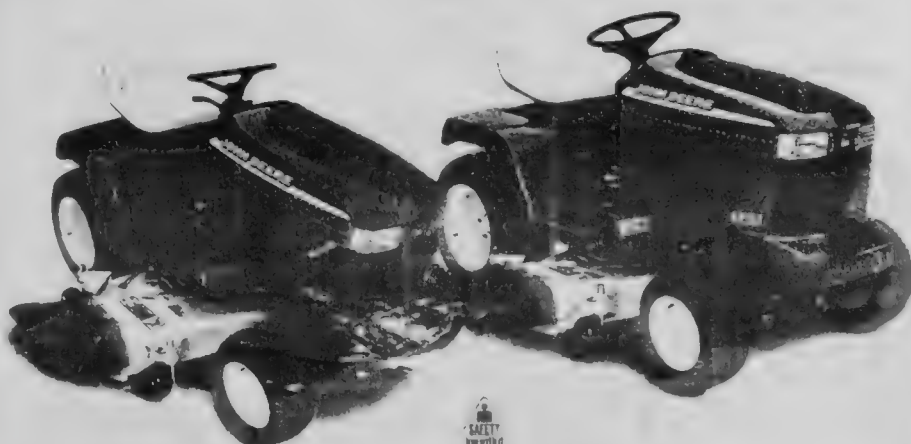

Nash is a 1992 graduate of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and joined the U.S. Navy in April 1993. He is expected back in our area on leave at Christmas.

All-around performers

Count on our 325 and 345 Lawn and Garden Tractors for a long list of extras that make any job almost effortless. Like our exclusive Twin Touch™ foot controls that let you easily adjust speed and direction with one foot. Or a Quik-Tatch™ mounting system that attaches in minutes. There's even a hydrostatic transmission for infinitely variable speed selection. So if you want a long list of extras, without an extra big price, stop by your local John Deere dealer. See for yourself why the 325 and 345 Lawn and Garden Tractors are such impressive all-around performers.

CARDS OF THANKS

I am most grateful to so many people who have aided my recovery since my unfortunate accident. To my family and neighbours, to my nurses Donna and Mary Ellen and to Nancy. I am indebted to my many friends for your loving concern demonstrated in such ways as planting and weeding my garden and flowers, spending the nights, shopping and bringing the mail - such a host of lovely cards. Thank you too, for your phone calls, visits, gifts of flowers and food and especially your prayers. Truly a memorable 85th birthday!

God Bless you all.

Bette Herlihey.

We would like to thank all our friends and family who so ably helped us celebrate our sixty-fifth wedding anniversary on June 28. Thanks again and may God Bless.

Morgan and Harriet Loucks.

Sincere thanks to Rozanne Hynard for her help on June 11 when we had car trouble on Highway 35.

John and Vivien Mann.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our heartfelt thanks to our family, friends and neighbours who helped us celebrate our fiftieth wedding anniversary on Friday, June 23 at Lochlin Community Centre. A special thank you to Mildred, Lois and Betty for all the planning, preparation and decorating of the Community Centre that made the evening so very special. Thanks to all who supplied flowers, to the Lochlin United Church Outreach Committee, to Yuvadee for her lovely drawings, to Jon for the great banner and all who prepared the delicious food. Special thanks to Rev. Harry Morgan for his heart-warming message and prayer. We are deeply touched and truly blessed.

Shirley and Jack Hill.

With a heart full of happiness and love, I want to say "thanks" - a small word, but full of meaning - to my sons, daughters, daughters-in-law and sons-in-law and all who worked so hard to make my 80th birthday so special. To my grandchildren, nieces, nephews and their mates and all my friends whose presence really made it special, another "thanks". The dinner was super, the flowers lovely, the gifts just great, the cards very touching. Club 35 was donated for the evening by my brother Louie and Jeanne Penick and perfectly suitable for such an occasion. For such a splendid evening I can only add "I love you all so very much". Thanks again,

Mary Colman.

The Lioness Club of Minden would like to thank the Beer Store and the Liquor Store for allowing us to collect donations in front of their premises on June 30, 1995. Because of everyone's generosity and "Bedside Manner" we raised just over $800 for Minden Hospital Equipment Fund. Our appreciation to CIBC, Minden IDA Drug Store, Westside Jug City and the TD Bank for allowing us to advertise in your windows. Last, but not least, our thanks to Minden Hospital for the Hospital Gowns and Bedpans. Thank you all.

Lioness Michelle, Chairperson, Bedpan Blitz '95.

CARDS OF THANKS

Words never seem enough to cover the thoughtfulness and tender loving care given our late husband and father, Mark Vasey, during his lengthy illness at home and while in the Haliburton Hospital. Thank you to Dr. Wu, Dr. Hayes, the nursing staff and the ambulance crew. To all our relatives and friends who offered condolences, cards, flowers, memorial donations and food, the wonderful staff at the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home and the ladies of Minden United Church, we thank you.

Carrie, Gary, Glen & Hugh Vasey.

Sincere thanks to everyone for their assistance with our house fire. Our son Jim is home and well and we are most grateful to you all.

David & Ann Voicey & Family.

Thanks to all who came to my surprise party which was a surprise! It was great! Thanks to my Carol and all who helped her. It sounds like it was a lot of work keeping me from knowing. Thanks again.

Dan the Fireman.

AT REST

FEUREAU:
Donald Jack

(Resident of Harcourt Park) Peacefully at Haliburton Hospital on Thursday, July 6, 1995 in his 61st year. Don was the broker and owner of Montage Real Estate Ltd., Wilberforce. Past President Haliburton District Real Estate Board, Past President Wilberforce Curling Club, Former Director of Harcourt Park Inc., Member of Royal Canadian Legion Wilberforce Branch #624 and Founder of Southeastern Haliburton Loop Association. Also remembered by his stepdaughter in law Brenda. Dear brother of Sue and her husband Lawrence Myers, Shelly Sauve and Mark and his wife Andrea. Sadly missed by nine grandchildren, Matthew, Michael, Jonathan, Nicole, Julian, Alissa, Shannon, Jenny and Derek. Also fondly remembered by his sister in law Evelyn Davis. Friends called at the HALIBURTON COMMUNITY FUNERAL HOME, Hwy 118, Haliburton (705) 457-9209 on Sunday afternoon, July 9, 1995 from 2 o'clock for Funeral and Committal Services at 3 o'clock. As expressions of sympathy donations to the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary would be appreciated by the family.

"One must experience the bad in order to appreciate the good in life..." Don.

IN MEMORIAM

STAMP: In loving memory of my dear husband Sid, who passed away on July 11, 1985. In a quiet country graveyard, Where the gentle breezes blow, Lies a husband I loved so dearly And lost, ten years ago. I do not need a special day To bring you to my mind, For the days I do not think of you Are very hard to find. Sadly missed and loved, Elsie and children and stepchildren.

KELLY: In loving memory of a dear husband, father and Papa who passed away July 14, 1989. O happy hours we once enjoyed How sweet their memory still But death has left a loneliness The world can never fill. Always remembered, Annie and Family.
